Richmond society was patriotically insclined last week. It entertained visiting Colonial Dames, went to the annual reception of the Dames and to that given by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and salled gayly down the historic James on Saturday, to renew once again its impressions of the "Cradle of the Republic," at Jamestown.

Richmond society was not only patriotic, it was musical, as witness the concert it attended on Thursday evening in Marphy's hotel annex for the benefit of the Hoque for Incurables.

For this week affairs will take a literary turn on Monday evening, when society listens to Miss Hatcher's lecture at the Woman's Cub. Artistle instincts will be aroused by the spring exhibit of the Richmond Art Club, beginning Tuesday, May 17th, and by the song recital to take place on Friday, May 20th, These are only some of the things to which society is looking forward. When all are taken into consideration, it will be very well and very thoroughly amused.

Ninth Annual Exhibit of Ninth Annual Exhibit of Richmond Art Club The ninth annual exhibit of the Art Club of Richmond will be held from May 17th to 28th, in the Crenshaw building. No. 11 West Main Street, the private view taking place on the evening of view taking place on the evening of May 16th.

The Art Club congratulates itself on the fact that the exhibit promises to be fine, and that the names of out-of-town exhibitors are, many of them, known in the art world as representing foremost lines of study and expression. The exhibit has been secured at great expense by the club, which stands in this community as a factor for the education of tastes and the uplifting of standards, as the exponent of what is really fine and at the same time truly practical, as somemunity as a factor for the education of tastes and the uplifting of standards, as the exponent of what is really fine and at the same time truly practical, as something which should appeal strongly to the tastes and needs, not only of the few, but of the many.

The members of the club hope, therefore, that the exhibit may prove a source of inspiration to all who come within the geope of its influence, and they will welcome gladly all those who come to look at the beautiful pictures and see through them what is going on in the art circles of other cities outside of Richmond. Oil paintings, water colors, miniatures, pastels and illustrations will be shown.

The exhibit of the Richmond Art Club will include paintings in oil and water color, drawings from life and antique, composition and anatomy and—in the Arts and Crafts department—designs for oil' cloths, fabrics, book covers, book plates and magazine work, metal work, decorative glass and wood decoration.

The president of the Art Club is Mr. James. H, Dooly, Mrs. Malvern C. Patterson is vice-president, and Miss Elizabeth Rodman Selden secretary and treasurer.

Club, Miss Orle Latham Hatcher will deliver a lecture on "The Rise and Development of the English Novel." Miss Hatcher is a woman of unusual intellectual attainments and great interest is felt in her first appearance here since taking her Ph. D. degree at the University of Chicago last winter, when she was one of three students, and the only woman to gain this distinction.

It will be remembered that Miss Hatcher is a Vassar graduate and has the degree of B. A. from that college, and of B. L. from Richmond College. She held the chair of English at the Woman's College for some years, and her work there was distinguished for its thoroughness as well as its high intellectual qualities. Later she went to Chicago for a special course of study at the University, and after having accomplished an incredible amount of work in the oniversity, and after naving accomplished an incredible amount of work in the time allowed, she took this degree so rarely attained by women. And with all her learning, she is still thoroughly womanly and unaffected, and her afternoon at the club promises to be one of peculiar interest and pleasure. The lecture is at 5 o'clock.

MAN ABOUT By Harry Tucker

When sweet spring onions scent the air,
And buds are on the melon vines;
When cloudy weather follows fair,
And breezes sough through stately pines.
Then comes the time we love to go
Down by the little babbling brook,
To lay us gently down, you know,
In some soft, mossy, shady nook.
We love to watch the cat birds sing;
To hear the timid fishes float,
When dashes fire the proper thing.
To stick in lapsel of our coat.
Tis side to gather berries where
The chigger makes his humble home;

The chigger makes his humble home;
The chigger makes his humble home;
The chigger makes his humble home;
The nice to sit and ponder there,
While down our back the anties roam
We love to don our summer rags;
To take our Panama from soak;
To grin at vaudevillians' gags;
And giggle over ancient joke.
The family plenic, oh, what joy!
To sit beneath the spreading tree—
And once more be a little boy;
Oh, me, how happy we would be!
We love to drink the aqua pure,
That flows from mountain top to seas;
That flows from mountain top to seas;

To bask in sand on distant shore, What joy, what bliss, oh, hully geel Such things for us will never be, Our happiness is all in hock; Oh, Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee, There's nothing laid up in our sock

And hard, The other man makes A home run after catching three balls And two strikes, and the sun sinks Into oblivion, carrying with it the Crushed ambition of the fellow Who is up against it, it's pretty hard. Or words to that effect.

When the soft zephys of hot weather rub themselves up against us, we feel like everybody else, and go at once to Capitol Square to commune with the Capitol Square to commune with the squiriels and make ourself so tired looking at them run about, that we go to sleep or the cushioned benches.

That is, we would go to sleep, if Colonel Richardson didn't hit us on the soles of our shoes with his billy.

Then we sit up straight and look over toward the City Hall and smoke one or two of Charlie Gressett's Richmond cigars, and dream things in the smoke, and regret that Henry Lerch has changed his headquarters.

Inventor Arrived Yesterday and Will Continue Experiments. (By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—William Marconi arrived to-day on the Campania. He brought with him several assistants and will continue his experiments at the Glace Bay station, Cape Breton.

Marconi says he succeeded in maintaining constant communication with shore

Marconi says he succeeded in maintaining constant communication with shore stations during the voyage. The success of these tests, he says, insured the publication of a daily newspaper at sea.

A new set of instruments, which had been prepared especially for use in the trials, made during the voyage, enabled the operators, the inventor says, to communicate with the eastern shore for a distance of 1,700 miles. In the meantime, before signals with the eastern shore failed, the station at Glace Bay on the western shore had been picked up and communication was continued uninterruptedly.
